Google Calendar

Click on Google Calendar and you'll be redirected to your Google Calendar, where you'll be prompted to add events directly to your Google Calendar. It might take Google some time to get the events; they might not show up immediately. Also, if you choose this option, Google Calendar will update with any event changes from the website every 24 hours (this time frame is created by Google Calendar).

iCalendar

Use the iCalendar option to subscribe to the calendar in your iCalendar application. The frequency with which this calendar syncs with iCalendar will depend upon your iCalendar settings.

Export Files

The Export .ics file option will download an .ics file for you to add events to any other application that you'd like. Once exported, this will not change, so you'll need to export a new .ics file every time new events are added or modified.

Note: Access to the .ics file must be set to public, otherwise it will not display for your users.

If you're wondering what an .ics file is, it allows you to import events into a calendar application, like Apple's iCal or Google Calendar. For example, here are the step-by-step instructions for importing an

.ics file into a Google Calendar.

If you go with the Export option, your calendar will not be automatically updated with new events or if an event changes. So make sure you check to see if the event you are expecting is still on the calendar ahead of time.
